

Qatar plans multi-billion power, water projects

Wednesday, 25 June 2008

DEMAND SURGE: Qatar is set to launch a number of multi-billion dollar power and water projects to meet increasing demand.

(Getty Images)

Qatar Electricity and Water Corporation (QEW) is set to launch a number of multi-billion dollar projects, in a bid to meet the country's surging power and water demands.

The projects include a water desalination project, a power project in Mesaieed Industrial City and the country's largest power generation and water desalination project, Qatar daily The Peninsula reported on Wednesday.

The largest project planned will be a power generation and water desalination plant owned and operated by Ras Girtas Power Company.

The project will be undertaken with a consortium of partners, the newspaper said, citing a report from Global Investment House.